GOP Assembly committee hopes to persuade young New Yorkers to stay here

HUDSON – The Assembly Republican RemainNY task force spent the last two days in Columbia and Dutchess counties meeting with the Hudson Valley’s young professionals to learn about challenges they see before them.

Committee Co-Chairman Marc Molinaro said many of their concerns are universal.

“For young people in the Hudson Valley, we’re talking about finding a good paying job and how that is in conflict with a very high cost of living, and they very much want to remain here, and some may want to move here,” he said.

The task force met with chambers of commerce in Hudson and Fishkill and conducted an agricultural roundtable with young farmers in Valatie.
